Why should you have to pay so much to learn so little? One day in a computer training class could cost you hundreds of dollars, and you're lucky if you actually learn what you came for. At the end of the day or a few weeks later, like most people, you will most likely have forgotten much of what you learned.

With CompuTrain's Interactive CD-ROM Computer Based Training, you can learn so much and pay so little. (i.e.$39.95 vs. $300 or more) . Not only do you learn what you want when you want and where you want, but also, you are trained by the industry's leading expert. You can learn it once, learn it twice, or learn it as many times as you want to, but the benefits don't end there. You can pass that very training course on to someone else, as long as you adhere to CompuTrain's user licensing policy. You will discover that our Interactive CD based training is interesting and exciting, and defies the myth that "video" training is boring. The simplicity of our system makes it easy and convenient for you to learn at your own pace with nothing but your computer and CompuTrain Interactive CDs.

Our state-of-the-art technology will not only allow you to navigate and control the learning pace, but also, to interact with your computer anytime you want hands-on skill training. With the music and interactive video we have built in, there is no way you will "sleep" in the class.

Best of all, our products are satisfaction guaranteed. If you are not happy, just send them back within 30 days to get your full refund less shipping costs. We have thousands of happy clients all over the world.

Major training and skill development agencies and organizations such as Ross's Learning, State of Michigan's Employment Development Agency, Quantum Training, Bank of America, U.S. Air Force and the list can go on and on, have used our products for their computer skill training.
